Abstract: When it comes to a vision for a sustainable energy future, from Camden, to New Brunswick, to Newark, Rutgers University students, faculty and administration are showing leadership on many fronts including policy, education, research and development and social activism. The State of New Jersey applauds these efforts and urges the university to become involved in the creation of New Jersey’s energy master plan. The learning and example set by this institutional citizen of the State can help all New Jerseyans.
