Understanding planning and zoning in New Jersey takes time and effort. Now a new manual from the Center for Government Services at Rutgers, The State University of New Jersey, makes the learning process easier. Planning and Zoning in New Jersey, by Stuart Meek, PP, and Jacquelyn Zelinka, PP, is aimed at helping planning and zoning board members meet the new state mandatory training requirements and learn how to do their jobs better. The illustrated 151-page publication contains clear, nontechnical explanations of the state Municipal Land Use Law and practical advice on making zoning, subdivision, and site plan decisions. Accompanying the manual are study questions and answers that board members can use to prepare for the test given in all of the courses approved by the New Jersey Department of Community Affairs. An extensive bibliography also is included.
